++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Grey and mild, some wind and rain mainly in northwest.

This Evening and Tonight:
Mild and murky for parts of Wales and central and southern England, but with drizzly rain easing. Clear spells but patchy fog and frost across northern England. Scotland and Northern Ireland turning cloudier, with gales and rain in northwest later.

Tuesday:
Wet and windy at times across west and northwest Scotland. Patchy drizzle in the south but elsewhere often cloudy and dry after fog eventually clears. Very mild in south.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Rain clearing Scotland and Northern Ireland on Wednesday, then mostly dry. Often cloudy and gloomy, but some brighter spells are likely, mainly northeastern parts. Gentle winds, with temperatures gradually falling.
